Education, Healing and Inspiration

Message from Ted

Dear VCC Community,

The manipulation and separation of humanity increased exponentially this week with the hostilities in Israel and Gaza. This is the latest of a series of strategies to pit one sector of society against the other and keep us distracted and divided. The psychological weaponization of care and compassion has shifted from vaccination to Russia and Ukraine, and now Israel and Hamas.

What is missing in all of this is thoughtful discourse and a willingness to look beyond the images being projected on our TV screens and laptops, and ask the question – Are we being played? Who is pulling our strings? Who benefits when humanity focuses on each other as the enemy? The false narratives on both "sides" allows the moneyed interests, the military industrial complex, and the corollaries to continue to benefit from violence and war. I suggest we need to identify the correct enemy, and it's not each other.

Vincent Gircys, in his career with the Ontario Provincial Police, conducted forensic analysis of accidents to determine the probable cause.

Vincent learned that his analysis had to be based on solid evidence or it would not withstand the test of cross examination. Opinions were meaningless unless based on a solid foundation of facts. He also learned that the process of cross examination is how truth is revealed and that we should welcome cross examination.

This same principle holds true for the ideas and ideologies present today. Can they withstand the test of cross examination? Are they based on facts strong enough to withstand the rigors of debate? The problem is that debate is no longer allowed. There is no opportunity for cross examination. Instead, we are to accept the presented narrative because to do otherwise is to invite shaming, shunning, and censorship.

I remember a time in my youth when my extended family would have rousing and robust discussions around the kitchen table. Voices were raised and passions aroused, and in so doing, ideas got tested, and arguments refined or revisited. I suggest we need more of this, not less. The human condition is complex and complicated, and our perceptions and ideologies need the refinement of cross examination. We need to learn to tolerate debate, challenge, and some cross examination, otherwise they will keep us in a constant state of war.

Digging into the Benefits of Vitamin D

As a life-long student of human physiology, James has long acknowledged the benefit of Vitamin D to our health. With the advent of Covid-19, the role of Vitamin D has been a subject of increased interest since all over the world research has revealed that severe infections, hospitalizations and deaths were directly (inversely) related to the serum levels of Vitamin D. Let's dig in to learn about how Vitamin D was designed to work synergistically with other nutrients to bolster our immune system and how best to incorporate it into our supplements regime.

Protect Pregnancy and Breastfeeding Campaign

A collaboration by the Canadian Covid Care Alliance and the Mama Bears Project has brought together an international panel of experts to launch this campaign, creating a resource guide on COVID-19, mRNA vaccines and the safety and ethics of their use by pregnant and breastfeeding women. The campaign seeks to educate and empower women to make informed choices for themselves and their babies. Deanna McLeod HBSoc and Mary Sharpe RM, PhD will join us to talk about the campaign.

Deanna is an expert in evidence-based data analysis and medical publications peer review. She is chair of the strategic advisory committee at the Canadian Covid Care Alliance. Mary is a registered midwife and associate professor in the Midwifery Education Program at Toronto Metropolitan University. She supports undisturbed pregnancy, birth, and lactation and is an advocate for informed choice and the precautionary principle.

Peace Begins With Me

Author - Ted Kuntz

A continuation of the six ways

I fed my negative wolf.

Delaying Happiness

One of the ways I fed my negative wolf was to delay my happiness. I would regularly make statements as: “I’ll be happy when . . .” I’ll be happy when .....the weekend comes.

..... I get a job.

..... I’m on holidays.

..... I retire.

..... I get married.

..... I get divorced.

..... I have children.

..... the children leave home.

..... the mortgage is paid off.

..... I win the lottery.

When I make these statements I am essentially declaring, “I’m not happy now,” and “I’ll be happy some time in the future.” I’ve discovered that this way of thinking doesn’t serve me well. It doesn’t increase my happiness. Instead it delays my happiness. It convinces me I need something other than what I have in order to be happy. It removes happiness from my present and places it in my future.

Even on those occasions when the items on my list finally occurred, I noticed my happiness would be short lived. It's because a new item would quickly replace the now acquired item on my list. I realized that my unhappiness was due to my thinking rather than an absence of items or events. When I acted as though happiness was something to be acquired in the future I never experienced happiness in a lasting, meaningful way. It continued to elude me. I now accept that my happiness isn't dependent upon acquiring things or events. It's not about the job, retirement, getting married, getting divorced, winning the lottery, or my son's health. It's a fallacy to think happiness comes from things or events.

STAND UP FOR TRUTH AND FREEDOM

A symposium to address issues of concern...

❑ Canadians have not been informed of potential risks of the Covid -19 shot.

Scientists and doctors worldwide have expressed concerns regarding the novel mRNA Covid-19 injection, a genetically engineered medical treatment. Any and all requests to discuss such concerns with Health Canada and Justin Trudeau have been ignored, while Canadians are told the shot is "safe and effective".

❑ Scientific findings and dissenting voices have been censored.

The doctors and scientists speaking publicly about their concerns are denigrated and censored. Doctors who have offered patients informed consent have had their licenses to practice suspended by CPSO.

❑ Fundamental rights and freedoms are being eroded!

A case expected to reach the Supreme Court is a challenge against CPSO by the doctors regarding their right to fully inform patients of their fundamental right to choose or refuse any medical procedure.
